

Satellite radio has been the best thing to me since I found out how to cook (a couple of years ago). I can now travel back and forth from school and not worry about static and music I do not particularly care for. If I want alternative only, then I know where to go, rap is the same way. My style varies but my channels do not. Music in the city where I attend school is just not up to date; so having all of the new music before most people get to listen to it has its advantages and is really cool. Shutting down this will only create strikes and much unneeded controversy domestically. We already deal with enough bull with the foreign nations; why do we need it in our nation?
